Centre-right JOINTS The emergence of the centre-right JOINTS in the European Union which are forming alliances of countries with democratic, but high-tax, welfare states. Belgium is a prominent member. John Dickie John Dickie is head of the Centre for European Reform. He was previously the deputy director at the University of Kent and contributing editor at the European Law Journal The centre-right European coalition whose power base is the Netherlands and Belgium, have been characterised recently as a Jean-Claude Juncker plus soft eurosceptics. However, the real significance of the centre-right coalition that is emerging across the EU is far greater. The centre-right coalition is really a Jean-Claude Juncker plus soft eurosceptics plus the French Socialists. Nor is this coalition and its centre-right JOINTS limited to the centre-right in the mainstream Parties. It also includes the Freedom Party in Austria which has been in coalition with the Freedom Party in Austria (FPÖ) but strongly links to the German Christian Democrats (CDU) at home and in the EU. In Italy the region of Lombardy, governed by the Democratic Party, which, in the recent General Election, voted for the centre-right coalition of the Party of European Socialists (PES) and Lega Nord (LN) and which in fact governs, is dominated by the Democratic Party. In Poland the Polish People's Party (PSL) which voted for the centre-right coalition is governed by the Socialists, the Law and Justice Party (PiS) which voted for centre-left coalition is led by a former leader of Solidarity and is governed by the Socialists and the People's Party (KORWIN) which voted for a centre-right coalition is governed by Civic Platform. The centre-right coalition

Fallout 4 ran on PC at a lower resolution than it does on console. As a result, the game appears to run at a relatively high frame-rate in comparison to Fallout 3 (when it was at the same resolution). That's not to say that it runs smooth and it certainly doesn't, but it looks more fluid than Fallout 3 did. A very noticeable difference is the lighting, which is quite different in Fallout 4 than it was in Fallout 3. The overall lighting can still be pretty dark, but it's better than it was in Fallout 3. Given that console doesn't handle dithering very well, it's understandable. as a new concept, it needs to be tested and applied to more groups and data. Conclusions ===== Our study shows that current physical activity guidelines may not be sufficient to attain a beneficial effect on health and wellbeing in older adults, and suggest that the ideal dosage of physical activity in older adults should include the proposal of higher levels of weekly MVPA and be monitored in the longer term. The proposed dose of physical activity for the older adults is also in line with current *Activelifestyle*programme for older adults. Future studies should evaluate whether the proposed dose of physical activity is effective in promoting physical and cognitive function over the course of older adult lives. Finally, the proposed dose of physical activity is also more aligned with a primary prevention perspective.
